The Chagos Football Team is based in Crawley, near London, where the Chagossian community has been in exile since it was forcibly evicted from its Indian Ocean homeland in 1966. The British government sold the Chagossian home, the island of Diego Garcia, to the U.S. for a new military air base.

Thousands of miles away from its ancestral home, the Chagossian community continues to fight to be allowed to return to its islands, proudly maintaining its unique identity in Crawley and elsewhere through language, song, culture, and, of course, football, to let people know about the Chagossian history.
